HONGRONG, OCTOBER 21st, 1878.

THE correspondence relating to the Dietary Scale and Structure of Victoria Gaol which the Governon laid before the Legislative Council at its last, mooting, are published in are dated in 1877 and their contents have been already made public through the 1878. medium of HIS EXCELLENCY's speeches on crime and prison discipline. The latest dispatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 5th June of the present column. It is a document which requires grave consideration, pointing as it does to the possible repetition of the Stonecutter's said last Monday, that as regards gaol ac. Amoy expressing to that gentleman, his entire commodation, "We must deal with the matter like men of business, and we have to face the requirements of the Colony and those of the Secretary of State," but prudence suggests that we should endeavour to keep the Colony clear of the criminal population of hension was felt at Mariao on the receipt of this Kwangtung rather than build costly structures for their longment and provide therein. for their board. The system of punishment ought to be of a strictly deterrent nature, so that Hongkong should be looked upon by the criminals of the adjacent mainland as a ing ground.

It will be remembered that the Governor; when he spoke in the Council Chamber on the necessity of enlarging the gaol, said Mr. Price had prepared plans according to which the present gaol might be adapted to the separate system at a cost of $95,000. These plans are disapproved of by Sir MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH, on the ground that the airing yards, already small, would be still further diminished, and that such a On the 13th June a regular engagement took Hougkong 10th, Singapore 18th August, left diminution of the prison yards together with place between a sotnia of Cossacks and a band Sues on the 12th September four days early. the crowding of fresh buildings on the present site would be highly detrimental both to the discipline and the sanitary condition. of the Gaol. He also says, addressing the GOVERNOE, "I observe that both you and the Surveyor-General refer to the question. of the reconstruction of the Gaol as depen- rifles bearing the "Winchester" brand. The the shipping movements at Bremen there are dent on the project of transporting long sentenced criminals to Labuan. It may be convenient, therefore, that I should at once state that I am not at present prepared to entertain this suggestion, and that any scheme for the improvement of the prison discipline in the Colony should proceed on the assumption that Hongkong will have to most successfully produced. His Excellency's transportation scheme, therefore falls to the never more successful in his noting and singing, applanded. The various sections have been conground, probably on account of the opposition of the present Governor of Labuan. The settled native population At six o'clock on Saturday morning the fire must, of course, in the natural order of things, these to deal with our present gaol would ! fur too large. The common sense plan dealing with the criminals from the mainland would soom to be to keep them at a distance, and with this view the means already provided should be strictly put in force, that is, the free use of the cut and the deportation of old offenders. The rigorous prosecution of doubtful characters as rogues and vagabonds would also have a good effect. With regard to the proposals of the Secre tary of State for the Colonies in relation to the enlargement or removal of the Gaol, we cannot agree with either. In the first place, the project to extend the Gaol up to Caine Road would involve an enormous expense, in the shape of compensation to the owners of the substantial houses existing on the site, without at the same time giving the necessary space. If the present Gaol must be enlarged, the best plan will be to incorporate the Police Barracks and the Magistracy Compound. New barracks could be erected on | 31st August, and 80th September, 1878, are however, to see the necessity for any very extensive addition to the Gaol if deterrent

It may happen, perhaps, that—owing to the red tape of the Colonial Office-before any plan has been approved we shall be able to reduce the number of prisoners so materially that it will be found unnecessary to proceed with the scheme of enlargement. It would be hard, indeed, if the circumlecution and prograstination of the Colonial Office did not sometimes work to the benefit of this Colony. We have waited patiently for many years until some venerable fogey condescends to bestow his attention on the plans for the Praya Wall we shall, mayhap, wait with still greater patience for many more years for the same ancient party to deliver himself on the plans

A NEW CRATER IN THE MOON a lunar crater some three miles wide, which had not before been observed, and which, he feels sure, was not in existence two years ago. Astronomers have long since given up all hope of tracing either the signs of actual life upon the moon or traces of the past existence of living creatures there there are still among them those who beliave that by sedulous and careful scruting processes of material change may be recognised in that seemingly inert mass. In reality, perhaps, the wonder rather is that signs of change should not be often recognised, than that from time to time a new crater should appear or the walls of old own earth. craters fall in. The moon's surface is exposed to variations of temperature compared with which those affecting the surface of our earth are altogether trifling. It is true there is no summer or winter in the moon. Sir W. Herschol has spoken of the lunar seasons as though they resembled our own, but in reality they are very different. The sun's midday. height at any lunar station is only about three degrees greater in summer than in winter: whereas our summer son is 47 degs. higher in the sky at noon than our winter sun. In fact, a midsummer's day on the moon does not differ more from a midwinter's day, as far as the sun's actual path on the sky is concerned, than with us the 17th of March differs from the 25th, or the 19th of September from the 27th. It is the change from day to night which chiefly affects the moon's surface. In the lunar year of seasons, lasting 346 of our days, there are only 114 lunar days, each lasting 29% of ours, Thus day lasts more than a fortnight, and is followed by a night of equal length. Nor is this all. There is neither air nor moisture to produce such effects as are produced by our air and the moisture it contains in mitigating the heat of day and the cold of night. -Under the sun's rays the moon's surface becomes hotter and hotter as the long lunar day proceeds until at last its heat exceeds that of boiling water; but so soon as the sun has set the heat thus received is mpidly radiated away into space (no screen of moisture-laden air checking its escape), and long before lunar midnight a cold exists compared with which the bitterest weather ever experienced by Arctic voyagers would be oppressively hot. These are not merely theoretical condusions, though even as such they could be thoroughly relied upon. The moon's heat has been measured by the present Lord Rosse (using his father's splendid six-feet mirror). He separated the heat which the moon simply reflects to us from that which her heated surface itself gives out (or, technically, he separted the reflected from the radiated heat). by using a glass screen which allowed the The Rev. J. Woodward writes to Notes former heat to pass while it intercepted the and Queries:—The paragraph from the latter. We doubt not that, however different the general cently called the attention of astronomers to past history of our earth may have been from the moon's, terrestrial regions exist where the characteristic features of the moon's surface are more or less closely illustrated. On the American continent, for example, there are some peculiarities of geological formation which seem to correspond closely with some of the features of the lunar globe presently to be noticed; and it seems to us improbable that geologists might find in the study of certain regions in North America the means of interpreting the difference of tint between higher and lower levels on the moon. If so, light would probably be thrown on very difficult questions relating to the re-
